

Web Summit Center Stage: Fiskl and WePay Partner to Bring Fiskl Payments

Fiskl Payments, powered by Chase, empowers small businesses globally

LISBON (Web Summit) and LONDON, United Kingdom – November 4, 2019 – Fiskl, a mobile-first financial management platform for micro-businesses, today announced its partnership with WePay, the integrated payments business of JPMorgan Chase & Co, at Web Summit, the largest technology conference in the world. Through this partnership, Fiskl will provide its small businesses with a new solution: Fiskl Payments, powered by Chase.

The new partnership will help its U.S., Canadian, and UK small businesses get paid faster by invoicing and taking payments on mobile devices. Fiskl Payments will also be available to its UK customers by the end of 2019. A mobile-first financial management platform with customers in 116 countries, Fiskl provides small business owners with a next-generation platform to manage their finances, business and staff from anywhere, including the ability to invoice and take payments globally.

“Spending less time managing payments means small business owners can focus on what matters to them most, which is growing their business,” said Matt Floate, Head of UK, WePay. “Small businesses are the backbone of the world’s economies, yet they are the ones still penalized when waiting for their funds to be available, and WePay is working on changing this.”

“Fiskl Payments offers small businesses the power to invoice and take payments globally, as Fiskl supports over 60 invoice languages, 150 currencies as well as global taxes,” said Alina Lapusneanu, CEO of Fiskl. “We are excited to launch an agile payments platform, backed by one of the world’s largest financial institutions, for Fiskl customers, with benefits that fulfill the greatest pain points for small businesses.”
